PROPOSAL FOR
AN OFFICE OF NATIONAL SECURITY COMMUNICATIONS
(In the Executive Office of the President)

Senator Henry M. Jackson (D., Wash.), Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on National Security Staffing and Operations, today released a statement by Professor Robert W. Tufts proposing a small, central Office of National Security Communications in the Executive Office of the President.

Jackson said: "In the near future, our Subcommittee will take testimony on this organizational innovation proposed by Professor Tufts."

The Tufts statement was made to the Subcommittee in connection with its current inquiry on the administration of national security at home and abroad.
